SPECIAL FOCUS

UNESCO CULTURAL HERITAGE IN LOMBARDY. A PHOTO EXHIBITION.
OPENING CEREMONY AND SPECIAL CONCERT ON
STRADIVARI GOLDEN BELL 1668

21/2 H. 5:30 PM (UAE TIME ZONE)

GINTER BAR, INTERCONTINENTAL DUBAI MARINA

Since 1979, when UNESCO gave Italy its first recognition, in Lombardy in fact, by adding the Rock Engravings in Valcamonica to the World Heritage List, Lombardy has received 20 UNESCO recognitions that include material and intangible heritage, Creative Cities and Biosphere Reserves "UNESCO Cultural Heritage in Lombardy" is the first international photo exhibition dedicated to UNESCO heritage in Lombardy, the Italian region with the highest concentration of UNESCO recognitions. The exhibition aims to offer a unique opportunity for learning about Lombardy's extraordinary and varied UNESCO cultural heritage to visitors, particularly those who live in the United Arab Emirates.

Evocative photos take the viewer on an ideal journey through the wonders of cultural heritage in Lombardy. Photos range from one of the world's masterpieces of painting, The Last Supper by Leonardo da Vinci, to exceptional evidence of the urban, architectural and artistic ideals of the Renaissance in Mantua and Sabbioneta and 8 other sites, and from Biosphere Reserves and Creative cities to transhumance, the seasonal droving of livestock along migratory routes, and 3 other intangible cultural practices. The latter include Traditional violin making in Cremona, one of Lombardy's unique crafts of worldwide renown, which in 2022 celebrates ten years since its UNESCO recognition in 2012.

THE STRADIVARI GOLDEN BELL 1668

In collaboration with Fondazione Politecnico di Milano and as part of Innovation House, Regione Lombardia is pleased to host the Stradivari Golden Bell 1668. Cremona is the world capital of violin making, a fine craftsmanship tradition listed by UNESCO as an Intangible Cultural Heritage of Humanity. The world's most famous luthier, Antonio Stradivari, lived and worked in this city from the seventeenth into the eighteenth century. He crafted stringed instruments still today unmatched for their beauty and timbre. Cremona's violin-making tradition began in the mid-sixteenth century, with Andrea Amati, and it is kept alive today in the many modern luthiers' workshops. The Golden Bell violin is a magnificent expression of the Antonio Stradivari's early production. In its original condition and perfectly preserved, it belongs to the private Alago Familienstiftung collection. It is temporarily on display at the Museo del Violino as part of the Friends of Stradivari network.

LENA YOKOYAMA

Soloist from Japan who trained in Cremona, also participated in the advanced level courses held by Salvatore Accardo at the Walter Stauffer Academy. She has collaborated with the Fondazione Museo del Violino since November 2013 and is a founding member of the Trio Kanon. During the pandemic, her videos from Torrazzo or from the roof of Cremona Hospital, viewed worldwide, were a signal of beauty and hope.
